

Lebanese Elections: Summary of Regional and Coalition Voting Preferences

Survey Summary:

A comprehensive assessment process, gathering election data from voters all over Lebanon, has been active in Lebanon since May 1. In this latest survey update, we present data drawn from all four of the assessments that have taken place so far. In particular, in this survey we present trend data regarding the shift in electoral preferences over time. Data was gathered from up to 10,000 survey respondents on: May 1, May 12, May 18, and May 25.

Data Assessment:

The most recent round of data collection has allowed us to track data trends over time. Below we present a snapshot of voter preferences as they have developed as elections approach.

Two trends seem apparent:

- 1) That the number of undecided voters appears to be decreasing. Naturally, as Election Day approaches, the % of voters who have made up their minds goes up; and
- 2) A moderate trend in favor of the March 14 coalition appears to have opened up.

Survey Date	Expected number of parliament seats for each coalition:
	May 1	May 12 (scenario 1)	May 12 (scenario 2)	May 18	May 25
March 8	66	68	46	56	60
March 14	62	60	82	62	68

Developing support for March 8 (M8) and March 14 (M14) coalitions over time:

- Our data consistently shows that up to 50% of Lebanese voters will be traveling on Election Day to vote in their home districts. Therefore, ease of movement and perceived security will be critical to ensuring voter turnout.
- In the pages that follow, we present, first, an overview of regional political sympathies, and then a detailed summary of regional voter preferences.

Lebanese Elections: Regional Summary

Confirmed (difference between coalitions is > 5%)

Probable (difference between coalitions is between 0.1-5%)
